

The Ingram M-11 is here.

A new concept of defensive armament, the M-11 provides unprecedented firepower to law-enforcement agencies. At an effective rate of 1200 rounds per minute with easy-to-control stability, it has been likened to a one-hand shotgun for its massive bursts of sheet fire. It has the concealment capability of a pistol and superior balance, minimizing recoil in automatic fire. With the addition of its sound suppressor (silencer), the weapon becomes practically silent in operation with recoil reduced to negligible proportion.

The significance is clear to any officer or special agent that has encountered "life and death" situations. A one-second burst from the M-11 (20 rounds) has a remarkable way of effecting apprehension and restoring law and order.

The M-11 is U.S. made, accepts .380 A.C.P. ammunition in 16 and 32 round magazines, is trouble-free in operation and maintenance, and is just one part of a unique weapons system from the Cromwell Corporation designed to keep the upper hand where it belongs — in the hands of the law enforcer.
